Hole In One

A hole-in-one is one of the rare achievements that professional golfers always long for. When a golfer holes out the ball from the teeing ground with one stroke, he or she earns kudos for having made a hole-in-one. As it's a once-in-a-lifetime achievement, every golfer remembers when he or she achieved the feat. They also remember if their friends have made it. Golfers are crazy about Holes-in-One. Making the shot is the ultimate trial of their skill and proficiency. Those who achieve the feat become so elated that they throw a party at the clubhouse. It's the memorable moment of anybody's golfing career. Although the fellow golfers join the party and celebrate the occasion, they definitely feel jealous about the achievement.

It's a dream for every professional golfer to make a hole-in-one at least once in his or her career. But making a hole-in-one doesn't take too much time. Golfers just need six seconds to make a hole-in-one. Some golfers come extremely close to hitting the target, but the honor remains illusive for them. The closer they come to hitting the target, the more they become hopeful of their chances. But the magical swing that eventually makes a hole-in-one possible is extremely hard to come by.

Even for the most prolific player in the golf circuit, making a hole-in-one is a difficult job. A hole-in-one is a 150-yard shot. Golfers start practicing the shot well before the tournament. However, the standards for granting a hole-in-one are still very unclear. If you want your hole-in-one achievement to be recognized officially, you will have to produce a witness in support of your claim. When big prize money is involved, the authorities will ask for authentic proof substantiating your claim.
